The proposal will address the role of relief houses during the Tokugawa period and the domains established, which won the bakufu's approval and returning them to the social structure. If we see the relief houses as a social control method with multiple ideologies, we can understand the various, sometimes contradictory, characteristics and roles of the relief houses during the Tokugawa period.

"You're not just buying coffee": Ethical consumerism in the age of global capitalism

Friday, December 4 / 12:00 PM
HSSB 6056

The Role of Relief Houses during the Tokugawa Period: A panel discussion treating the futures of racial, ethnic, and economic diversity in the UC system in an era of budget crisis and fee deregulation. Faculty include Professors Julie Carlson (English, UCSB and Academic Director, Project Exile), Mariela Ramos (History, Latina/o Studies, University of the Pacific), Claudia Martinez (Director of Academic Preparation, UCSB), and Jeffrey Stewart (Chair, Black Studies, UCSB).

Sponsored by the IHC’s Future of the University series.