

Dorothy Sue Cobble

Rutgers University

Paper: Intimate Labors Conference, October 4-6th, 2007, University of California, Santa Barbara

Intimate Unionisms

Workers servicing the bodies and emotions of others are now central to the economy. Drawing on a historical analysis of the distinctive nature of collective organization among this group of workers, my paper will discuss how the current models of unionism must transform if they are to be relevant to the experience and needs of the producers and consumers of intimate labor.