In her retelling of fairy tales published in the volume Red Ridin' in the Hood and Other Cuentos, the Mexican American author Patricia Santos Marcantonio makes use of a series of elements to provide a Latinx version of these fairy tales to counterbalance the lack of representation of Latinx children in the books she read growing up in the United States. In this presentation, Marina Bernardo Flórez will explore the elements Marcantonio modifies in order to subvert these fairy tales with a Latinx flavour.

Dr. Marina Bernardo Flórez is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Education at the University of Barcelona. She researches Chicana children's literature and carried out postdoctoral research as a visiting scholar at the UCSB within the Fulbright Program.
